

Mine-Mouth Power Generator Planned For Kentucky

A plan to build large electric generating plants in the coal fields of Appalachian and supply the eastern United States with sizable blocks of low-cost power via a major transmission system was announced today by a group representing consumer-owned electric utilities from New England to Florida.

Hugh L. Spurlock, chairman of the steering committee of the Yankee-Dixie Power Association, said the $1,037 billion project would serve an area which includes 400 municipally-owned electric utilities and more than 200 rural electric co-operatives.

The 600 local consumer owned electric utilities are located in Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky and Florida.

The Yankee-Dixie group stressed that although the plan has been conceived by consumer-owned utilities, it is hoped that investor-owned electric companies will join in detailed studies now underway.

"Benefits to all groups of customers would be tremendous," Mr. Spurlock said. "If all segments of the electric utility industry of the eastern United States will cooperate fully, initial planned generation could probably be doubled with further reduction in the delivered cost of power."

Studies prepared by the engineering firm of Laramore, Douglass, and Popham of New York and Chicago envision three minemouth steam generating plants in Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Alabama, linked by approximately 670 miles of double circuit, 500,000 volt, extra-high voltage transmission lines. Another 2,425 miles of 500,000 volt and 345,000 volt transmission line would fan out to cover the principal load centers along the eastern seaboard, and would interconnect with existing transmission systems.

Total generating capacity at the start of the project would be 6 million kilowatts, with 2 million kilowatts of generating capacity located at each of the three sites. Estimates indicate that more than 5,000 new jobs would be created to mine the 15,000,000 tons of coal required each year to operate the giant plants.

An average delivered cost of 3.5 to 4 mills per kilowatt-hour for high load factor power is predicted.

"We believe the program would have many benefits," Mr. Spurlock said. "This plan would provide a source of power in the eastern United States at a price far below present costs."

In Florida, for example, it could cut the cost of power nearly 25%, while in New England the reduction in power cost could be as much as half. Throughout the 18-state area wholesale power costs could be lowered an average of 30% below present prices, or more.

"It would aid the economy of the Appalachia region itself, not only in providing more jobs for mine workers, but in encouraging industrial development in the region through availability of low-cost power."

Mr. Spurlock said that the economics and engineering of the proposed transmission system have been studied and found to be sound. Consideration is being given to use of a portion of power sales revenue to establish a fund for economic development in Appalachia.

Mr. Spurlock stated that the plan is "in full harmony" with the recently-released "National Power Survey" prepared by the Federal Power Commission, and would provide a "badly needed" extra-high voltage 'backbone' transmission line from New England to Florida.

"Such a 'backbone' will not only allow delivery of low-cost, mine mouth energy by wire to existing high-cost energy areas, but will also provide broad scale economics in diversity and capacity interchange between all eastern utilities," he declared. He cited as precedent benefits achieved through co-operative action by public and private systems on the West Coast.

"Essentially, we are seeking the same type of North-South the West Coast," Mr. Spurlock said. "Our project can result in a major reduction of the cost of electricity to eastern consumers."

Costs of the project were broken down to include $581 million for construction of the three steam generating stations and $452 million for the 3,100 miles of extra-high voltage transmission line and auxiliaries, with $4 million for land, communication, and other expenses.

Financing of the plan would be carried out through issuance of revenue bonds sold in the private money market and underwritten by power sales contracts. No Federal funds would be required for construction and operation of the project. Operation of the system would be on a "cost of service" basis.

Rejected Poverty Planner Suggests Public Hearing

The president of an Indiana planning firm whose offer to help the Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council plan its war on poverty was turned down by the Office of Economic Opportunity two weeks ago has suggested that local leaders seek a Congressional hearing, to be held in Hazard, on the way the Economic Opportunity Act is being implemented in this region.

T. Brooks Brademas, president of City Planning Associates, Inc., of Mishawaka, Indiana, said in a letter to The Hazard Herald that Eastern Kentucky "is being short changed" by the Economic Opportunity Program.

"The Upper Kentucky River Area is being denied the very opportunity that was to have been provided by the Economic Opportunity Act," Mr. Brademas wrote.

"I would hope that you and other leaders in the Upper Kentucky River Area would strongly urge that Congressional hearings on the Economic Opportunity Program be held in Hazard so that you and other interested citizens can determine first hand why Eastern Kentucky is being 'short changed' by the Economic Opportunity Program."

Brademas was writing in response to an article in last Thursday's Hazard Herald in which this paragraph appeared:

"The question in the minds of UKRADC leaders now is, who applied for the planning grant, worth some $130,000, in the name of the Upper Kentucky River Council?"

To answer that question, Brademas enclosed a letter from UKRADC vice chairman George Wootton, County Judge of Leslie County, to EOA director Sargent Shriver, dated October 26, 1964.

Judge Wootton wrote to Shriver: "The Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council has, by resolution, retained the firm of City Planning Associates, Inc., to assist them in the preparation of their Community Action Program. We have directed City Planning Associates to proceed as quickly as possible to represent to you our proposal for a grant to develop a comprehensive Community Action Program."

Two weeks ago, Hazard Mayor or former UKRADC chairman Willie Dawahare received a letter from Frederick Hayes, associate director for community action in the Office of Economic Opportunity, notifying Dawahare that the planning project had been rejected by the EOA.

Hayes told the Hazard Herald on the telephone that the project was rejected because the individual counties making up the UKRADC had all applied for planning grants on their own.

Leslie and Letcher County have had their grants approved. Perry County's is now being considered.

Mr. Brademas took issue with Mr. Hayes' reasons for the rejection of the project that would have hired his firm.

In his letter he said: "Your

ARA Encourages Magic Mountain

If the Kentucky State Park system would agree to operate it, the federal Area Redevelopment Administration will help Hazard construct its 'Magic Mountain', Mayor Willie Dawahare said yesterday.

And though the State has not said it would be willing to include the tourist attraction within its park complex, the Courier-Journal today reported that Governor Breathitt said he would do all in his power to see that financing for the project is obtained.

The ARA has reportedly accepted as sound a feasibility survey that Magic Mountain could be a successful venture.

Present plans call for such features on the mountain as a cable-car ride, a year-round ski slope with six lift, riding trails, swimming, a model coal mine, and a small lake in the valley.

If it is developed, the facility would be in the vicinity of Town Mountain at the edge of Hazard.

Object of Suit

This is the land fill on the old Bingham property at the intersection of East Main and Laurel Streets that has caused the Commonwealth to sue the Hazard Investment Company. A motion to dismiss the suit has been overruled. The State charges the fill creates a flood hazard, in violation of a state law.

Dismissal Overruled In River Fill Law Suit

Circuit Judge Don A. Ward last week overruled the Hazard Investment Company's motion to dismiss the Commonwealth's suit against it that charges the firm violated the law by dumping earth and rock in the river floodway to make a building lot.

The State filed its suit last September after the Hazard Investment Company cleared a lot formerly known as the Bingham property at the intersection of East Main and Laurel Streets and increased its surface area by elevating the river bank portion with a land fill.

This, the State charges, is in violation of Kentucky statute 104.403, passed by the 1964 legislature.

The company argued that the Commonwealth's complaint, filed last September, failed to "allege or show that the Division of Flood Control and Water Resources Development has ever established any floodway in the area alleged to have been affected."

The law defines "floodway" as "the area outside the banks of a channel which carries off flood waters" and requires that before any type of fill or embankment can be installed within it, plans and specifications for the fill must be submitted for approval by the Department of Natural Resources.

The State alleges the company did not submit such specifications, and that the fill constitutes a future flood threat to property and persons upstream from the fill.

Assistant Attorney General David Schneider was in Hazard Monday, March 29, to argue the Commonwealth's case in the hearing on the company's motion.

Bruce Stevens of Hazard is named as the Hazard Investment Company's attorney.

Martha Maggard, Hazard Resident, Dead At Age 84

A Hazard resident, Mrs. Martha Maggard, 84, died yesterday morning at 4:20 a. m., at the Mt. Mary Hospital.

She was born in Harlan County and was a member of the Thornton Regular Baptist Church at Mayking.

Mrs. Maggard is survived by four sons, Charlie of Pontiac, Michigan, Delza of Lexington, Ed of Detroit and Gurnis of San Diego, California; and two daughters, Mrs. Lora Martin of Lothair and Mrs. Ruby Breeding of Isom.

Other survivors include two sisters, Mrs. America Sturdivant of Verona, Kentucky, and Mrs. Cora Hornsby of Greeley, Colorado; twenty-eight grandchildren, 35 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning (Friday) at 10 a. m., at the Maggard Funeral Home Chapel with Reverends Charlie Cornett, Ray Collins and Ed Henegar officiating.

Burial will be in the Isom Cemetery with the Maggard Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

The grandsons of Mrs. Maggard will serve as pallbearers.

New Christian College Will Be Established On Letcher Campus

A non-denominational but church-oriented college is being established on the old Stuart Robinson School campus at Letcher, Kentucky, near Blackey.

The college, which will offer a four-year liberal arts curriculum leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, does not yet have a name, but it will be operated by the Open Door Children's Home Board.

The Rev. James Bender of been selected, he said. He said the college probably would begin operation with a small student body but that the Board hoped it would soon grow to the neighborhood of 250 students.

The Open Door Children's Home Board recently purchased the campus from Lees Junior College, a Presbyterian school at Jackson.

The Presbyterian Church, U.S. operated Stuart Robinson School on the site from 1914 until the late 1950's, when it closed except for permitting the Letcher County School system to use some of the classrooms and gymnasium facilities.

The Rev. Bender said part of the new college's support will likely come from the establishment of a mobile home factory on the campus. The factory would begin on a small scale, perhaps producing mobile campers as a first product.

Combs Will Run For Representative

Roland Combs

Mr. Roland T. Combs, a democrat from Hardburly, has announced his candidacy for the office of State Representative subject to the primary election, May 25.

A native of Perry County, Mr. Combs is the son of Tilden and Ellen Holliday Combs, with whom he resides. He has one sister, Lora V. Birmingham, and two brothers, Dr. Lyndon F. (Little Doc) Combs and Tolbert Combs, the present Commonwealth's Attorney, both of Hazard.

Mr. Combs is a graduate of Henry Clay High School, Lexington, and attended school at Lee's Junior College, Jackson and the University of Kentucky, Lexington.

He was employed by the Hardy-Burlingham Mining Co., and it's successors since 1932.

Mr. Combs is a member of Masonic Lodge F&AM, Hardburly, V.F.W. Club in Hazard and U.M.W.A.

A veteran of World War II, Mr. Combs served with the 82nd Airborne Division from the time it was activated Fort Bragg, North Carolina, until he was honorably discharged. He received seven battle stars for the following campaign: North Africa, Sicily, Italy, Normandy (France), Holland, Belgium, Germany, (Battle of the Bulge) and a Presidential Unit Citation.

Mr. Combs stated, "Further statements in regard to my candidacy for the office of State Representative (Democratic Primary) will follow from time to time as the campaign progresses."

Local TV Station Begins Operation

Regular WKIC radio announcers Julius Lasso, left and Quentin Combs got new jobs added to their customary ones this week when Hazard's channel 4 TV station came on the air. The station broadcasts regularly, five days a week, from 6 p. m. to 6:30. The 30 minutes features a 10 minute newscast by WKIC general manager Ernest Sparkman, and then sports news and weather by Lasso. The newsmen also help to operate the camera equipment when they are not on the air.

A Threat Or A Hope?

If you only skimmed the lead article at the top of the front page of today's Herald, then by all means read it again, and read it very carefully.

Because it is talking about a subject on which the entire fate of this part of the country could hinge.

It is talking about generating massive amounts of electricity right here in Eastern Kentucky, for use in major urban centers along the East Coast of the United States.

It tells of a plan to burn Eastern Kentucky (and Pennsylvania and Alabama) coal in mine-mouth steam generating plants that will manufacture electricity on the spot, for use in cities from New England to Florida.

If the plan materializes into living reality—as it will likely do—it will practically revolutionize the way our coal is used.

Instead of Kentucky coal transported from the region for use in making electricity, the coal will be burned right here and the electricity will be the exportable commodity.

It is estimated now that a staggering 15 million tons of coal a year would be required to operate the three huge generating plants, one of which will be in our own mountains of Kentucky.

The impact of the presence in Eastern Kentucky of a generating plant of the size now planned might very well be compared to the impact of the birth of the coal industry itself, early in this century.

For with such a huge, handy new market for our coal, the industry could, in a very real sense, be "re-born."

And like the first birth of the industry in our Kentucky mountains, this re-birth carries with it all the old, original promise for complete development of the region, at the same time that it carries a dread threat, an ominous portent, of continued rape of the Kentucky hills.

The first life of the coal industry in Eastern Kentucky destroyed these mountains.

A couple generations of people earned their livings here, to be sure. But the real profit from our coal went to the bank vaults in the East, through a curse known as absentee-ownership.

Our county governments, and our school systems, were and still are literally starved because the enormous wealth that went out of here was untaxed.

And unless we are very diligent, our wealth may continue to be stolen at an even greater rate, in the form of untaxed electricity.

The promise of the new electric power venture is so great it is hard to comprehend.

The first estimate is that five thousand new jobs will be created immediately, just to mine the coal for the steam plants.

The promise of new jobs is of course wonderful to consider. But if this power venture is to profoundly and fundamentally benefit Eastern Kentucky, it must do so by ways other than immediate jobs. We've got to get more than wages out of it this time.

The electricity must be taxed by local governments, by the local governments of all the counties that supply coal to feed the generator.

The steam plant must not be allowed to use coal derived by the strip-mine method. Strip mining is a curse in itself, and a huge, new market would double the speed at which the bulldozers are destroying our hills.

And the steam plant must not be allowed to use coal mined by cheap labor in unsafe working conditions.

The promise of the electric plant within our own Eastern Kentucky neighborhood is wonderful to consider.

Those that really understand its full promise are as excited as those old ancestors of ours who were thrilled to see the railroad cut through the hills, and to see the towns crowded by land and mineral buyers, and later, to see brand new towns spring up overnight as the large companies built their camps and imported their sturdy laborers.

We, now, are justified in that same kind of excitement, that same kind of hope and optimism, if we are willing to learn history's lesson.

New coal markets on a great scale can provide the salvation of our economy.

The markets can also contribute to our traditional problems, through increased and more rapid outside exploitation.

The safeguards for our future must be written into the initial concept of this new enterprise.

The enterprise will either be for us Kentuckians or against us.

The suspense is great indeed.

Hospital Hostility

Some time this month, representatives of the Appalachian Regional Hospitals, Inc. and the Benedictine Sisters, who operate Mount Mary Hospital, will confer in Washington to explore ways in which Hazard's two general hospitals might merge into one 200-bed facility.

Such a merger would see the existing ARH hospital at Airport Gardens expanded, to be operated by the Benedictine Sisters.

The planned conference is a result of a recommendation made recently by a State Health Department survey team that Hazard Appalachian Hospital be granted federal funds to expand, and a further recommendation that Mount Mary's request for similar funds to rebuild not be granted.

We were disappointed that the government did not look with more favor upon the Sisters' wish to rebuild their hospital in downtown Hazard. The Herald championed that cause the best it could. No one in the mountains loves the Benedictine Sisters more than we do.

It is apparent now, however, that the Sisters will not receive Hill-Burton funds to rebuild. We would like to indulge in some wishful thinking on this point, but facing the facts of reality is our duty. And the recommendation of the Department is an undeniable fact.

The government is not going to finance two competing hospitals in the same community.

Mount Mary's alternatives now seem to be narrowed to three choices: leave Hazard, merge with ARH, or rebuild a small hospital with whatever capital the Sisters can muster.

We prefer to not even consider that the Sisters will leave Hazard. The prospect is that unpleasant. We plead with the Sisters to not entertain such a notion, and we plead with the community to share our attitude and to seek whatever adjustments and compromises are necessary to keep them here.

Apparently that will be the purpose of the Washington meeting: to seek some kind of compromise, some flexibility in the fixed policies of the Sisters and of the government, so that the Sisters might be enabled to operate Hazard Appalachian as so many want them to do, without either institution losing its identity to the other.

This is going to be an obviously big task. Getting a religious order and a hospital chain with responsibilities to the government to work as one unit hasn't many precedents in this country.

The task of compromise is unfortunately made more difficult by an undeniable split among well-meaning Hazard citizens, half rigidly supporting Mount Mary Hospital to the exclusion of the other, and vice versa. The split even seems to threaten some personal friendships in our town. This is very sad, and very inappropriate.

For now is the time when we need to avoid, of all things, an absolutely inflexible attitude, however our personal sympathies lie. We are not dealing in personalities in the hospital crisis. We are dealing with only one question: how to best serve the medical needs of this entire region.

The higher leadership of both hospitals seems to understand the need for mutual tolerance of the other's position, and certainly we are thankful for that. But among the citizens, among we laymen who have sympathies with one hospital or the other, the willingness to talk it over is less apparent.

We are only hurting ourselves by this approach. No one is ever completely right or completely wrong. There are arguments for both points of view, and the only rational and civilized behavior available to us now is to become willing to hear what the other fellow has to say.

Artist's Concept of Expanded ARH

Here is an artist's concept of how Hazard Appalachian Hospital will probably look if it receives federal Hill-Burton funds to expand its facilities. The tall structure in the center represents the proposed new wing that would add 84 beds to the present total, making 180 in all. Representatives of the ARH chain and Mount Mary Hospital will meet in Washington to discuss the possibility of letting the Benedictine Sisters assume managerial control of Hazard Appalachian if they do not rebuild Mount Mary.

Mr. Sargent Shriver, Director
Office of Economic Opportunity
Washington 25, D. C.

Attention: Mr. Jack Conway, Assistant Director
Community Action Program

Gentlemen:

The Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council was formed in two public meetings held at Quicksand, Kentucky, on September 19, and October 25, 1961. The preamble of the Statement of Purpose for the Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council states, in part, the following:

"We, as citizens of the Upper Kentucky River Valley area declare our mutual intent to join and work together for the development of greater opportunity for a better way of life for the people of our area through voluntary association of our interests and resources."

We believe that the Economic Opportunity Act and particularly the Community Action Program Section of the Act provides the assistance we have needed to help realize the basic objectives of our Development Council.

We also realize that the development of a Community Action Program as we envision will require technical assistance. The Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council has, by resolution, retained the firm of City Planning Associates, Inc., to assist them in the preparation of their Community Action Program. We have directed City Planning Associates to proceed as quickly as possible to present to you our proposal for a grant to develop a comprehensive Community Action Program.

In this regard, Mr. T. Brooks Brademas, president of City Planning Associates, Inc., will represent our Development Council and we ask that you advise Mr. Brademas if there is additional information you request in regard to the application so that it might be approved as quickly as possible. We are most anxious to move our program forward.

Due to the illness of Mayor Dawahare, chairman of the Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council, I, as vice chairman, am sending this request to you.

Sincerely,
George Wooten

Hazard Herald

Dear Sir:

In the April 1, edition of the Herald in the article entitled, "Washington Rejects Wrong Poverty Project" you stated, "the question in the minds of UKRADC leaders now is, who applied for the planning grant, with some $130,000 in the name of the Upper Kentucky River Council?"

I am enclosing a copy of the letter transmitting the application of the UKRADC to the Office of Economic Opportunity. I am sure, in all fairness, that you will agree that your article is not factual.

Your article also indicated that Mr. Hayes of the Office of Economic Opportunity stated to you that the rejection of the application of the UKRADC for a grant to develop a Community Action Program was based on an indication that the several counties in the area preferred to do their own planning on a county-wide basis. Mayor Dawahare personally advised me that he had contacted leaders in the several counties and that the Office of Economic Opportunity had never contacted any of these leaders. The reason given by Mr. Hayes for rejection of the UKRADC application is not supported by the facts.

The problems in the Upper Kentucky River Area are not going to be solved by a series of small unrelated projects on a county basis. While these projects have merit and should be carried out, I believe that your paper, as a leading voice in the Upper Kentucky River Area should speak out for the overall program that would have been developed by the application rejected by the Office of Economic Opportunity. The Upper Kentucky River Area is being denied the very opportunity that was to have been provided by the Economic Opportunity Act.

I would hope that you and other leaders in the Upper Kentucky River Area would strongly urge that Congressional hearings on the Economic Opportunity Program be held in Hazard so that you and other interested citizens can determine first hand why Eastern Kentucky is being "short changed" by the Economic Opportunity Program.

Sincerely,
City Planning Associates, Inc.

Regional vs. County Planning

It is regrettable that so much confusion has been created in the Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council with respect to the anti-poverty program.

Ideally, that Council, correctly oriented and organized, is the proper instrument to direct this region's long range efforts to remove the blight of poverty from our landscape.

Its principal weakness seems to be that it is composed only of laymen, well-intentioned amateurs who devote what time they can to the Council, but who have other primary jobs that demand most of their time.

Because of this, the Council has, from its inception, needed a full time, trained professional executive secretary, or planner, or developer or whatever you want to call him, someone whose only task is to look closely at the Upper Kentucky River Area, to determine its needs in an intelligent way, and then work full-time to try to meet those needs.

The Council last fall was approached by an Indiana firm interested in being retained as the principal planner for this area.

But the firm never managed to present its case to the Council in any satisfactory and convincing way. Its intentions remained obscure. No meaningful line of communications was established between the firm and the Council, and eventually the Council, that is, the full membership of the Council, ceased to consider affiliating with the Indiana firm.

Still, a project in the name of the Council was submitted to the Office of Economic Opportunity that asked for funds with which to hire the Indiana firm.

The EOA considered the project, but also noticed that each of the counties in the Upper Kentucky River Area had submitted individual projects for intra-county planning.

Leslie and Letcher Counties have already had their projects approved. Knott and Perry planning projects are being considered.

Because it appeared the counties preferred to do their planning separately, the EOA said, the regional planning project entered in the name of the Council, was disapproved.

It is understandable that the EOA would have that reaction, in view of the intentions of each of the individual counties in the area.

The question that remains now, however, is this: Will county-level planning to overcome our problems be as efficient and worthwhile as regional planning might have been?

The answer is obviously no. It is apparent, for one thing, that our individual county problems are the same. Therefore, separate planning offices in Whitesburg, Hazard, Hyden and Hindman will inevitably duplicate each other's efforts.

And duplication won't be the worst of it. Since the money being allotted to each individual county is so limited, the planning will of necessity be non-professional. Cheap, in other words, the end result being that instead of one well-drawn, professional plan for the region, we will wind up with four limited, maybe even identical, county-level plans.

The next question, then, is this: is it too late to turn this mistaken trend to our advantage? Is each county so far along its solitary path that it is now impossible to get them in a single harness again?

The answer is again no, if the Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council is willing to make some bold adjustments and employ a stronger, more imaginative approach than it has thus far.

The Council should immediately apply for an EOA grant to hire a full-time, well trained, well-paid area director to function as the action-arm of the Council, to act as the guiding light in the Upper Kentucky River area's anti-poverty effort. This man would have a permanent office, centrally located in the area.

This need not conflict with what each County has already begun, on its own.

Since the county-level planning projects are so far along, they should be encouraged. Their grants should be approved for this year, so that each county can hire its own local man, one removed from politics, to represent that particular county within the UKRADC.

This county man should function as an assistant to the UKRADC's trained planner, and be responsible to his authority. He would be in touch with the "poor people" as represented by the existing chartered committees of poor people.

What we would have, then, is a regional "boss" who knew what he was doing, with full time subordinates in each of the area counties. With that kind of non-political structure, ham-mous planning for the whole region could then proceed without duplication and shoddy, amateur attempts.

The Upper Kentucky River Area Development Council has been accused of being nothing more than a debating society which meets monthly. We support the Council, but it will remain open to this kind of charge until it captures the respect of the region's leaders. It must have a strong, full-time leader before it is going to really function as the originators of the Economic Opportunity Act intended it to.

We hope the group will consider this proposal at its next meeting.

They Said It Couldn't Be Done

Until recently, the problem of old cars scattered across the county, on hillsides and riverbanks, in front yards and on the roadways, seemed so formidable that one could only despair that they would ever be removed.

But now, thanks to the efforts of the Perry County Development Association and the Highway Department, Forestry Department and Hazard Vocational School and crews of unemployed fathers the plague of cars does not seem nearly so frightening any more.

By work already accomplished, they have proven the problem is a "paper tiger," to use a term from international politics. They have proved that the old cars can be licked.

Perry County is showing the way for all of Eastern Kentucky. We should not rest until we are completely free of the terrible eyesores, until we stand as a model for our neighbor counties to follow.

Old cars like these are the main target of the cleanup drive. So far, over 80 have been collected between Combs and Airport Gardens.

A Buck For A Boy

The Kentucky State Police have begun a project that deserves the support of all adults interested in young people, especially in underprivileged boys.

They will open a boy's summer camp on Dale Hollow Lake in June and operate it until August in eight 1-week camping sessions that will be free to the young campers, aged 10-14.

The youngsters will get to participate in a wide variety of healthful activities that might be familiar to more fortunate lads, but that will be brand new experience for these particular campers.

The camp will be operated by public subscription.

Since the cost is only $10 per week per boy, local civic clubs, churches and individuals have a wonderful opportunity to sponsor at low cost several boys from Perry County.

Our local clubs are traditionally responsive to appeals for support for such projects as this, and we hope the State Police's program will be no exception.

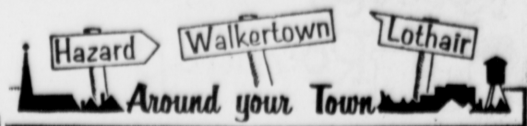

Donations should be mailed to Kentucky State Police Boy's Camp, Inc., Frankfort, Kentucky. Further information is available at the Hazard KSP post.

Temple Has No Clean-Up Campaign

Temple Hill, the hometown of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Parker, Oakhurst Avenue, was the subject of an article written by Mr. Tom Duncan and which appeared in last Monday's issue of the Courier-Journal.

According to Mr. Duncan, Temple Hill never has a clean-up campaign and why not? Because they never need one. Almost every house and lawn is immaculate at all times. Neither do they have a law enforcement clean-up for they have no trouble along that line either. Let us hope that all Kentucky towns and villages will soon fall into that category but we must bear in mind that in order for this to happen we must all become "clean-up" conscious and do our part toward keeping Kentucky clean.

How The Price Tag On Meat Is Decided

Cecile Townes — Home Demonstration Agent

Have you ever wondered how the retailer prices the meat for your table? The retailer takes several factors into consideration when merchandising:

Cost of Meat to Retailer — The retailer usually purchases meat by the side. The price that he pays will depend upon the grade—such as U. S. Prime, U. S. Choice, U. S. Good, and weight of the animal. If a retailer buys a 300 pound side of beef at 38 cents per pound, his total cost is $114.

Operating Cost — To the wholesale cost of the product, must be added a margin for operating costs such as the labor involved in cutting, wrapping, and pricing of the meat; refrigeration; rent; advertising; cutting loss; general overhead; wrapping supplies; and interest, plus a profit for the retailer. If a 20 percent mark-up is required, the total value of 300 pounds of meat becomes $136.80 or 42 cents per pound.

Waste Involved — Of the 300 pound side of beef only about 75 percent is saleable meat; the remainder is fat and bone. Now the retailer's cost per pound is 61 cents.

Demand Requirements — Rising consumer incomes and preferences for specific meat cuts, necessitates decision-making for the retailer more difficult and challenging in order to sell all of his meat. If the retailer sold all the meat at 61 cents per pound, all the steaks and roasts would be sold very quickly, but the meat case would be loaded with other cuts such as, short ribs, brisket, and boiling beef. In order to sell all the meat, the retailer must lower the prices of the less desirable cuts to make them a desirable buy and raise the price of the more desirable cuts to obtain the income needed to offset the loss on the less desirable cuts.

In addition to price differentiation, the retailer uses new styles and methods of presenting his product to the consumer—among them are the production of boneless items.

Competition establishes key prices for such standard meats as round steak, chuck roast, and ground beef. And the retailer must keep "in line" with these prices if he wants to maintain his share of the market.

Price Relationship — Customers become familiar with certain price relationships between various cuts of meat. They readily recognize that loin cuts, such as T-bone, sirloin and round steak are usually 20 cents a pound higher than rib cuts or rump cuts.

The Use of Specials—When specializing items, stores tend to special only one type cut per carcass—in order to clean up the total carcass and provide a balanced merchandizing program. Retailers tend to adjust prices downward through the use of specials which reduce prices 10 to 15 percent during periods of high prices and low supply and 15 to 20 percent during low prices and high quality. To the consumer special may be very important. On the average, the retail price of beef is lowered 3 to 4 cents, but if the shopper takes advantage of the best specials he can save 10 to 12 cents a pound.

Speedup Those State Tax Returns

The Kentucky Department of Revenue can process individual income tax returns—and prepare refunds where due—much faster than taxpayers are sending in their returns. Commissioner J. E. Luckett has announced.

He said the department's new and quicker method of processing returns makes possible the handling of 6,000 refunds a day. But to obtain this many returns with refunds due, an average of about 8,000 returns, or 20 bags of mail daily must be received, and mail has been averaging about nine bags a day, Luckett explained.

He asked that taxpayers send in their returns now to expedite the mailing of refunds if due.

By ROSCOE DAVIS

Bless my hide this the fifth day of April sure has made many of you have a notion of shucking off the long handles believe me if I hadn't already shucked mine, it would have a hot time next to thine skin today. So we can't be too far off from the sunshine and balmy weather. More power to it. Maybe it will cure a snotty nose for a spell. I know a lot of you have already partaken of some spring tonic, I have had an over dose of Sassafras tea, yes, the good old kind, all of you that I have given a mess or so of this too, you can thank Joe Napier and Herb Hayes from up Fourseam way, they have been bringing it to us to give to you for several years now, so folks our hats should be off to these fine gentlemen that will go into the hills in search of this spring tonic, which so many of you are not able to make such a jaunt in search of it.

THANKS TO YOU

BESS DRAUGHN and Edith Combs for getting me on the straight and narrow path in regard to how to spell ASAFETIDA, which one version of my book gives it, another one says it can be spelled ASAFOTIDA. Regardless of how it spells we know that it smells something like Carni, if you know what that is, it is like a dead horse that has become pure ly rotten. No wonder our folks used it to fight away certain types of diseases, the smell alone would do that. Yes, Edith it was a garlic like smell wasn't sure where it came from, since you say Asia, Persia and other far away Count ries, I can realize the reason it smells more like tee jam than anything I have run into. So much for that, again thanks ladies for being so nice to keep me posted on my unbelievable spelling as well as smelling of such things. Of course to day we might get the same stuff but flavored down with the essence of turpentine or something similar.

ONCE AGAIN

The mighty reaper from above has called one of our dear friends, this time it was Robert Cornett up near Christopher way. Robert loved the great outdoors and what it offered toward the pleasures of many. Ever since Deer Hunting became available in Kentucky again, Robert had a burning desire to kill a deer. Only this past November did this become a reality with him. His age prevented him from making too longer hikes over the mountains that he loved so well. Nevertheless, each season he was eager to make another try at it. I know that his many friends were so glad that he got one, yes only such a short time before he should counted in the gathering of the sheaves.

To you his nephews, brothers and friends that have been on so many trips with him, you will know what I am trying to say in regard to his last hunt, yes this one he registered on. It looks like that some one greater than any of us planned it this way for him. We who knew Robert in his seventy odd years had a lot of spunk and the willingness to try for another year, never becoming disheartened when he would see others bringing deer into the camp. He was never selfish about who killed game, he always would say boys I will get mine one of these days. After he made his kill last fall. I would say that he firmly believed that a greater power intended for him to do this.

To this bereaved family, I hope that I can speak for all his buddies in this trying hours of your loss of a loved one. It is hard to part with people that have been so near and dear to you. I know how we will miss seeing him, having friendly quarrels and chats. That was the way he proved to me that he liked you, yes throughout these hours of a loved one that has gone to that great unknown that we all must face sooner or later. May the comfort come to you as I am sure Robert would wish it this way.

THANKS TO YOU

For your nice letter from Ft. Myers, Fla., Joe Jones he has went and won himself medals down there catching fish. Joe says he has been deep sea fishing, and has won prizes for that also. Joe it is fine that you are having such a wonderful time in Florida. Know you are having a fine time from the way your letter reads. Give my regards to Clairbourn and hurry home. We need such people as you here in Perry County trying to help promote such things as they have in Florida. If the hadn't had people with foresight in Florida to see what could have been developed, it would today be infested with alligators, swamp grass and etc. People with visions can accomplish the same things here in Eastern Ky. Our season is coming in now, Florida's is going out. If every man, Woman and Child had some vision for Eastern Ky. you can and you are going to see some changes made here. We all seem to think that the pasture is a little greener some where else. LET'S START THINKING OF GREENER PASTURES HERE AT HOME. Joe don't win too many more me's down there, or we might not get you back in these hills.

HOW MANY

Of you have heard of a Granny Hatchet, Mrs. Vesta Hamilton says she is like one, just crawled out of the mud and made a trip to town Mrs. Hamilton I doubt if you got a chance to take a possum hunt last fall, so I guess that is the reason you state that you are like a Granny Hatchet. At least we know you are out of the hole, with this spring weather I would say you and the old man are well on the way to making hay such as mustard, lettuce beans peas and etc. Don't tell me you won't do it, I am coming up before too long and get me a mess from your garden. Sallet is coming, Polk, and what have you. Already the two messes I have had of young turnip greens, folks you can't beat that type of food. If we could get the younger generation eating more of this, it could over populate us at this season. Who cares since we are getting food stamps, health and welfare. May we all have a Happy Home.

COUNTY AGENT'S NOTES

Spring Pruning Raspberries

Paul Keen — County Agricultural Agent

Late March and Early April is an ideal time to spring prune raspberries and blackberries. Plants are still dormant and the likelihood of severely cold weather is practically gone. Fortunately, raspberries are the latest of our common fruit plants to bloom, and the danger of injury to blossoms from late spring frosts is less than with most other fruits. At Lexington, the average blooming date for black raspberries is from May 10 to 18, and red raspberries will average blooming a few days later than black ones.

Pruning Blacks

Cane growth which developed during 1964 will produce the fruit for 1965, and then these canes will die at least by the end of the 1965 growing season. Also, these old bearing canes will serve no particular benefit to the new cane growth. Thus, they should be removed and destroyed as soon as the fruit has been harvested. Another very good reason for their early removal is that they may carry diseases.

If growth has been satisfactory, there should be from five to seven good canes per hill together with the lateral branches which developed from each cane during the summer of 1964. Each of these branches may be as long as 6 feet or more, and the fruiting buds are spaced over their entire length. If all the buds were left on each lateral there would be far too many buds, so the spring pruning of black raspberries is aimed primarily in reducing the fruiting buds to suit the best bearing capacity of each cane and each hill. Experiments have shown that best results will be obtained when each lateral is shortened to a length of 10 to 12 inches. This is, of course, a drastic reduction in the number of fruit buds. But to have fruits of good size and attractive appearance, such a procedure is necessary.

To summarize: When the spring pruning is completed on a hill of black raspberries, there should be five or six canes in each hill, and each cane should have from four to six lateral branches each of which is from 10 to 12 inches long. From these laterals, mainly, the fruiting shoots will develop from the lateral mixed buds.

Pruning Reds

Red raspberries grow differently from blacks, and spring pruning is guided by this difference in growth. The most significant difference is the each.

fact that red raspberries show very little if any tendency to develop lateral branches regardless of how they are handled during the growing season. The buds from which his fruiting shoots are formed are located directly on the main canes. The most fruitful of these buds start at approximately 1 foot above the ground and from there to a height of about 5 or 5 1/2 feet on each cane. With red raspberries, instead of forming laterals, many new plants are developed from underground stems. These come up and form new canes along the row or even outside the regular row. Again, as was mentioned for blacks, the reds form too many buds and too many cane growth. So the grower needs to reduce this growth. Keep rows about 15 to 18 inches wide and thin the canes in the rows so that there are about 10 canes each 4 feet of linear row. In addition, canes left for fruiting should be headed at 5 1/2 feet.

To summarize: Thin the canes in the row so that there are 10 canes for each 4 feet; remove the smallest and weakest ones and then head the ones which are left at a height of 5 1/2 feet. Thus, for 100 feet of row there should be about 250 canes in a row which is 15 to 18 inches wide. Detailed information on pruning is given in Kentucky Cooperative Extension Circular 547, "Raspberry Culture in Kentucky."

Rejected Planner Suggests Hearing

stated to you that the rejection of the application of the UKRADC for a grant to develop a Community Action Program was based on an indication that the several counties in the area preferred to do their own planning on a county-wide basis. Mayor Dawahare personally advised me that he had contacted leaders in the several counties and that the Office of Economic Opportunity had never contacted any of these leaders. The reason given by Mr. Hayes for rejection of the UKRADC application is not supported by the facts."

UKRADC's participation in the anti-poverty program has been extremely confused so far, apparently due to a lack of communications within the organization, and between the organization and Washington. Many members of the UKRADC were not aware that a resolution retaining City Planning Associates had been passed.

And in writing to Mayor Dawahare about the rejection of the project, Mr. Hayes in Washington failed to state which project he was talking about, and local UKRADC leaders immediately assumed a recreation project sponsored by Hindman Settlement School and endorsed by the UKRADC was the project being rejected.

This caused Mayor Dawahare to write an indignant letter of complaint to President Johnson. Investigation showed, however, that the OEO is still considering the recreation proposal, and that it was the planning project that was turned down. (The letters referred to in this story are reprinted on the editorial page).

Film of German Opera To Be Shown Saturday

A film version of Mozart's famous opera, The Marriage of Figaro, will be shown in the Whitesburg Grade School Auditorium on Saturday evening, April 10, at 7:30. Admission will be free. The opera will be sung in German by outstanding artists, with English subtitles. The music is played by the Berlin State Orchestra.

One critic said about this movie: "Mozart triumphs . . . excellent English titles, capable acting . . . clear German . . . well-sung." Another said: "This Mozart opera is brought admirably to the screen. The perfection of Mozart's music has in no way been sacrificed to the visual presentation of this comedy plot. The playing of the Berlin State Orchestra is excellent."

A Charlie Chaplin short, Oh, What a Night, will also be shown. It is a Keystone Comedy starring Chaplin and Fatty Arbuckle.

These movies are the last in a series of four "Film Classics." The series has been supported by contributions of interested local citizens, and by teachers and students from the Whitesburg High School.

"Some Beliefs About Plants and Animals"

In my years of collecting and many longer periods of observation in my special territory I have not yet decided when a folk belief is to be taken seriously, or half-seriously, or nonchalantly. Certainly many older people planted their crops, butchered their animals, cut board timber, and planned every activity according to traditional beliefs. But undoubtedly many inroads had been made into this system of beliefs long before the oldest people I know were born. Therefore, there are varying degrees of acceptance of these age-old beliefs, which have been, usually, summed up in actual sayings and phrases.

Here are some examples of these sayings:

It is bad luck if an animal that has been injured by a hunter die in his hands.

It is equally bad luck to eat the flesh of any animal that was killed by lightning. This same belief carries over to plants, for it is bad luck to burn wood from a tree so stricken. And, incidentally, a fire started by lightning cannot be put out with water.

When animals of any type are unusually active and busy, look for a weather change, like a heavy rain or a snow. Hogs are likely to be carrying leaves or shucks in their mouths in anticipation of a cold spell.

Domestic animals are said to kneel on Christmas Eve (older people said Old Christmas Eve); but it is very bad luck, maybe fatal, to observe this annual rite of the creatures; hence nobody can be found who has been a witness to this.

Animals, fur-bearers and others—horses, etc., have a heavy coat of hair or fur before a severe winter, just as all sorts of plants set heavy crops of seeds or nuts, in anticipation of the hard times ahead for the animals.

Even though wood was for ages the one fuel of the cottage or the cabin, several species of wood were supposedly not to be used in this fashion. Applewood, for example, if burned, was sure to bring disaster to the one who burned it. Sassafras was rarely used in some families, but regularly used in others for stovewood.

William Howard Cohen, poet-in-residence at Alice Lloyd College, and his wife, Delores, will present a program of poetry reading and music at 11:30 a. m., in Prestonsburg Community College on April 22, as a part of the University of Kentucky's Centennial Series. Many of the poems read by Mr. Cohen will be taken from his latest book, "The Hillway Home." Mrs. Cohen will accompany herself on an Appalachian-made dulcimer, in a musical program of mountain ballads. Her professional training dates back to early childhood and includes studies in New York and Chicago. She toured New England with the Children's Theater Company, playing a leading feminine role in that Company's version of "Snow White."

Mr. Cohen's book of poetry has won the acclaim of leading critics at the Library of Congress and in 1963, he was elected to membership in the Poetry Society of America, the major organization of American poets. In his endorsement of Mr. Cohen, Jesse Stuart states: "To William Howard Cohen, fellow-poet of these hills; A true poet with the ear—the music—and the feel—of heart and mind."

This program of poetry and music was arranged through Dr. Anthony J. Salatin, Director of Alice Lloyd College's Speakers Bureau and may be made available to other groups in the area.

Dr. Gear To Talk At P'ville Meeting

Dr. Felix B. Gear, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. will be the featured speaker Tuesday night in Pineville at a meeting of special significance for Eastern Kentucky Presbyterians.

The occasion is a two-day spring meeting of Guerrant Presbytery, the organization of Presbyterian churches in some twenty counties in this area. Of special importance is the fact that Presbyterian churches in the twentieth of these counties—Bell—have just this year been transferred into the Presbytery by the denominational General Assembly.

Representatives attending from the Perry County area will include Rev. David B. Conley and a ruling elder from the Hazard First church; Rev. William C. Brown, pastor of the Lohair and Vico churches; Rev. J. Allan Smyth, pastor of the Tilford church; and Rev. Charles S. Sydnor, Jr., of Lohair, superintendent of home missions.

The importance of this occasion when Guerrant Presbytery will officially welcome the Ben County Churches pointed up by the fact of the willingness of the Moderator, Doctor Gear, to travel here and deliver the main address. His message will come during the special evening meeting of Presbytery Tuesday night—a program beginning at 7:30 which is open to the public and to which all Presbyterians and their friends in this area have been cordially invited.

A distinguished churchman, Dr. Gear is theology professor and dean at Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur, Ga. He is a native of Huttonsville, W. Va. and did Home Missions work in the coal fields of that state before moving on to the academic world, for which he was prepared through extensive study in this country and abroad.

Prior to January first of this year the Middlesboro, Pineville and Straight Creek Presbyterian churches have throughout their history been members of Knoxville Presbytery. The machinery of the Church was set in motion to transfer them to the life and work of Presbyterianism in the Kentucky mountains only after a vote of the three congregations requesting this move—a vote based upon their consciousness of identity with Kentucky and especially, of the problems and future of Southeast Kentucky.

Marine Corp. Leib Goes To Far East

Marine Lance Corporal Wayne O. Leib, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Leib of Emmalena, Kentucky, is serving with the First Marine Brigade, which recently departed its home base in Hawaii for duty in the Far East.

The brigade was originally scheduled to participate in the West Coast Navy-Marine Corps Exercise "Silver Lance" in late February but was cancelled out when the international situation in the Far East changed. The First Marine Brigade is one of our country's unique fighting units. It is the only known combat unit in the world in which air and ground elements live and train together under the same roof, and is under the control of a single tactical commander.

Women's Society Meets April 1; Combs Is In Cleanup Program

by H. C. Robertson
The Woman's Society of Christian Service held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Hoskins, April 1, at 7 o'clock. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Roy Fartney. Mrs. Don Fugate was in charge of the devotional. The Scripture lesson was taken from the 16th Chapter of Mark. Mrs. Newt Ellington read a poem entitled, "Welcome Happy Morning."

The business meeting began with a discussion of the needs of the Church. Plans were made to paint the inside of the Sanctuary, to rebuild the steps in front of the Church and complete the work that was started previously in the basement. There was also a discussion on the need to put concrete blocks around the back of the church basement due to the fact that the foundation has deteriorated from seepage. In order to secure funds for these church repairs, the W.S.C.S. will sponsor a chicken supper, Saturday, May 8, from 5 p. m. to 8 p. m., in the Combs Grade School lunch room. Tickets are on sale and may be purchased from any of the members of the W.S.C.S.

Delicious refreshments were served to the following: Mrs. John Coda Newt Ellington, Roy Fortney, Don Fugate, Carolyn, Donna Jo and Emery Fugate, Mrs. J. C. Hoskins Paulina Hoskins and the hostess, Mrs. Kenneth Hoskins.

Mrs. Johnny Bowles of Lexington, Ky., visited Mr. and Mrs. Don Fugate and family of Combs and Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Whisman of Viper over the weekend.

Combs has joined in the cleanup campaign. Several families have shined up their premises and brought the trash to the road side. The writer hopes that many others will follow the good example of their neighbors soon and dot the roadside with rubbish to be hauled away.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Combs, Lohair, Vico, Methodist Churches were held at Vico at 9:30 a. m.; Lohair, 11 a. m.; and at Combs at 3:00 p. m., Sunday, April 4th. Dr. William H. Pettus, the District Supt., presided at the meetings and brought messages at all the churches.

A Love Untold

By Ida Lee Hansel

'Twas Sunday morn as church bells tolled—

That I first spied this couple old—

Down the mountain side they came

Hand in hand, it was very plain,

That they shared a love untold,

So very rare, this couple old.

It was so clear to see

That in this life of misery

God is their pilot through life

Thro all their joys and all their strife—

Their hair was turning gray, but oh—

This did not seem to trouble them so.

They carried their Bibles under their arms

Anyone could see this was their charm

That guided them day by day

While traveling down life's highway.

You know 'tis love that makes the world go round—

Because right there in the middle of town

They stopped as if in a world of bliss

And he planted upon her cheek a kiss.

Then each turned to go his separate way

To worship God upon this day.

Their hands clasped no more, but yet

The love they shared was there, you bet,

As she went to her church and he made his way,

To the door of his church

Upon this Sunday.

When time for them is no more, And they are called to Heaven's Door,

They will clasp again their hands,

And walk around God's chosen land,

Where together they will always be,

Walking hand in hand through Eternity.

NOMINATE AND ELECT

T. G. BATES

For

Magistrate of District 4

Democrat Primary, May 25, 1965

STATEMENT TO THE VOTERS OF
PERRY COUNTY:

I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Magistrate, District 4, in the Primary Election, May 25.

I have lived in Perry County forty years. My life as a citizen is an open book to the people. I reared my family of five daughters and two sons here. They all graduated from Hazard and M. C. Napier High Schools. The daughters all married and moved away to find work. My son, G. Jr. graduated from Berea College and is now employed at the University Hospital, Lexington, Kentucky. My youngest son, I. J., whom you know for his excellence in Boy Scouting, is a Senior at Berea College majoring in Sociology.

Born in Letcher, I came to Perry County as a Section Foreman, then as an extra gang foreman and worked twelve years for the L. & N. Railroad Company.

During the great depression, I traveled for the General Motors Corporation. I worked over five mountain counties for them. I worked fifteen years. I met people and businessmen of all classes and I feel I gained their friendship. For this experience, I am very grateful.

Down thru the path of life I have tried to make every community in which I have lived a better place to live. I have given land for streets and roads. I have had sympathy for the poor and hungry and underprivileged everywhere and have tried to help them. I would like to see a good road and better living conditions up every hollow. I want to give the fullest cooperation to schools and churches for without them, we can't live.

I want to do all I can and show my willingness and feel that Perry County needs an experienced person who is not afraid of hard work.

That is why I ask you to support me in my race and if you feel it in your hearts to nominate and elect me, I will be there with the door open waiting to serve you.

Hopefully Yours,

T. G. Bates

Sunday School and Morning Worship	9:30-11 a.m.
-----------------------------------	--------------

Liberally mix several old tin cans full of fun, with a mop of hair that always seems to need to be cut. Sprinkle in streaks of omeriness, pride, courage, envy, and maybe even a little fear. And there you've made a boy. Well, almost. Boys, wonderfully, have a sweet sense of the bigness and beauty and mystery of things. And it's this sense of bigness, beauty and mystery we hope they'll never lose.

Contributed to Religion in American Life by:

Religion is an awfully big word to a little boy. But the spirit of it isn't. And it's the spirit of religion that can bring peace, comfort, security and goodness to a boy—his whole life through.

Hit-the-bat, hide-n'-seek—they're as vital to a boy as peanut-butter sandwiches. So is the help of true religious faith. Your children should worship this week in your church or synagogue. And the best way to see to it is to be there with them yourself.

Zing into spring! Chevelle by Chevrolet

'65 Chevelle Malibu Convertible— with color-keyed all-vinyl upholstery

It's the most popular mid-size traveler built—which isn't surprising when you consider who built it.

There's no doubt that a car like this could get by on its good looks alone.

But the fact that it is built by Chevrolet assures you right off it's got a lot more going for it than merely meets the eye. It tells you, for example, you can have the impetuous kind of power—6 or V8—that Chevrolet has a reputation for putting in its cars. It tells you that you get Body by Fisher handwork inside and out. It tells you that you're going to get a ride developed by engineers who are old hands at putting the squeal on bumps.

Knowing all this, you probably won't be startled by the fact more people are now buying Chevelle than any other car its size. But you will have a happy surprise when you check what you can buy one for—right now at your Chevrolet dealer's.
